From the President's Desk

Well, we are off and running! Unfortunately my schedule has also been "off and running" so I've had to cut back to a bi-monthly newsletter once again. Hopefully by next month I'll be able to go back to monthly issues.

Our last two meetings have had great turn outs, with everyone enthusiastic and willing to chip in. Lets keep the spirit going all summer!

A lot has happened and many decisions have been made during the past two meetings. If you had to miss them, make sure you read the minutes from the meetings so you can catch up.

If you have any questions along the way, don't be shy, please contact one of the officers - that's why we publish everyone's phone numbers to the left. We would love to hear from you.

Chapter Memberships

Last year our chapter was ranked the 3rd largest in the state. This year we have slipped down to fourth place. We haven't gone far, but any backwards movement isn't good.

Get out there and do your part! Everyone of us has a friend who rides but isn't a member of our group. Our club has the capability of spreading out and accommodating any interest in riding, giving your friend no excuse for not joining. This year we are planning to do some trail cleaning projects, trail riding, develop a drill team and to ride in some parades. If there is enough interest among the members, we can branch out into any type of horse event.

If each of us gets one new member this year, we could easily become the largest chapter in the state. And why not? Pendleton is a "Cowboy" town, with a very large percentage of the residents owning horses.

If you need membership applications, please contact me (Debbie) and I'll deliver some to you A.S.A.P.

Important Announcement

During the April meeting, the group voted to work on the bridge at Big Creek (outside of Ukiah). Rick G. has contacted me to say the bridge has more damage than he thought. This wouldn't be a problem seeing we were planning on working on it, but he does not have enough materials available for the repairs.

Although the bridge itself is accessible, the area were Rick needs to gather more material is still snowed in.

Rick will get back to us as to when we can reschedule this project.

User fees - by Ron C. Judd

Love them? Hate them? Get used to them. The federal government's three-year "experiment" with charging to get into federal lands you already own is well into Year Five and showing no signs of relenting. This in spite of the fact the program seems to be, at least by our standards, failing miserably to live up to its promise.

Specifically, Forest Service propaganda boldly states, "Proceeds go directly into restoring ecosystems, improving services and maintaining recreation facilities in your national forests."

What they don't tell you, but did concede to Congress in a fiscal-year 2000 report (www.doi.gov/nrl/Recfees/2001Report.PDF):

- While literature constantly preaches "ecosystems" as a priority, between 20 and 40 percent of proceeds, depending on the area, goes directly towards administering and collecting fees - and policing the parking passes, a practice the Forest Service has vowed to step up this summer. Another 30 percent falls into an amorphous "operations" category. And virtually all that's left is used to reduce maintenance backlogs on restrooms, roads, campgrounds, and, of course, offices for federal bureaucrats.

Example: The report shows the National Parks System taking in $133 million in user fees last year (down, in-centally, from $137 million in 1998 and $141 million in 1999). Money was spent accordingly: $36.3 million on "health and safety maintenance," $27.7 million on "collection costs," $12.6 million on "visitor services," $11.5 million on "other" and $3.4 million on "resource protection."

Likewise, the Forest Service, by the end of fiscal year 2000, had collected $88.4 million in user fees, spending $67.5 million of that. More than 80 percent of the $67 million went to "repair and maintenance, interpretation and signing, facility enhancement, fee collection and annual operation categories."

Necessary improvements? Absolutely. But a far cry from "restoring ecosystems" - unless large-scale toilet-seat purchases qualify as such. And probably a far cry from where many weekend hikers believe their money is headed.

• Just as user-fee critics long have predicted, Congress continues to slash federal money for hiking trails, campgrounds, backcountry rangers and other outdoor activities at an even greater rate than new money gained through user fees. National Forests in Washington and Oregon, for example, brought in $6 million in user fees last year. But their overall recreation funding has dropped from $35 million a year in 1990 to $28 million this year.

Wake up and smell the camp coffee, folks: You're not getting better wilderness or better recreation services by paying user fees. You're merely allowing the federal government to shift a larger proportion of the cost of fresh-air sports from a relatively progressive source (income tax) to a regressive source (user fees).

Don't think, incidentally, that this is a special-interest issue that affects only serious backcountry, adrenaline-sport junkies. It's a philosophy that's creeping into all aspects of public life - probably right down your own street at that beachfront lighthouse.

Get ready for the state Legislature to vote on new day-use parking fees at Washington State Parks - one of the last pure, free things about the Evergreen State. Remember that wonderful half-hour you spent in the sun two weeks ago at Saltwater State Park? Be prepared to pay five bucks for it next time.

Park advocates say the fees, in the (voter-approved) tight-budget world of Olympia, are necessary to keep parks from closing. And they'll support them only if the new money supplements, not replaces, existing general-fund cash.

As if. History - not to mention the federal example in our own back yard - suggests otherwise.

Oh well. Times do change. And maybe most of you don't have a problem with this. If that's the case, keep on doing nothing. It's working beautifully.

Update on the Visitor Use Regulations for the Eagle Cap & Hells Canyon Wilderness areas

A couple of months ago, the Back Country Horsemen were asked to give comments on proposed revisions to the visitor use regulations for the Eagle Cap and Hells Canyon Wilderness areas. The following is a reprint of the letter I received from the US Department of Agriculture in response to our comments.

Dear Reviewer:

I have reviewed all of the public comments received on the proposed revisions to the visitor use regulations for the Eagle Cap and Hells Canyon Wilderness areas. The comments reveal little public support for changes in the current group size and designated livestock camping proposals. The comments do strongly support enforcement of the existing regulations and increasing public information and education efforts.

The wilderness management issues identified through monitoring of resource conditions are very real and they will continue to be a challenge to address given the current staffing levels and the large, diverse landscape we need to patrol. In order to realistically address these issues for this year I have decided not to adopt the proposed regulatory changes for the Eagle Cap Wilderness regarding management of campfires, large groups, and designated stock campsites in the lakes basin area. Existing regulations will be enforced and information and education efforts will increase.

I have decided to implement one of the proposed regulations for the Hells Canyon Wilderness as follows:

Pack and saddle stock may not be tied to trees in camps except for the purposes of loading, unloading, saddling and unsaddling.

Implementation of this regulation has already occurred in the Eagle Cap Wilderness and has helped minimize the amount of damage caused to trees by some stock when they eat bark or paw at the ground compacting soil and exposing tree roots.

In addition, the proposed regulation requiring that only weed free supplemental livestock feed be allowed in the Hells Canyon Wilderness will not go forward at this time. Instead, a process has begun to formulate a similar regulation for the entire Wallowa-Whitman National Forest to take effect later this year. This process involves the Wallowa County Board, the Tri-County Weed Board, and the Oregon State University Extension Service.

The continuing effort to limit impacts, improve management and monitor conditions is not likely to succeed without partnerships and cooperation from people such as yourself who have an interest and connection to these public lands. I would like to take this opportunity to make you aware of some of the on-going and new efforts to inform and educate wilderness visitors and increase awareness of resource impacts and Leave No Trace techniques.

- “ Two training sessions for teachers in Wallowa, Union and Baker Counties have been conducted over the past several years. these sessions provided teachers with curriculum and lesson plans that describe wilderness resources and management issues. After completing the training, teachers gain access to the Wilderness Box. The box contains teaching aids and materials that relate to the lesson plans.
- “ Each year a Wilderness Ranger teaches a Leave No Trace segment as part of the Wallowa County Hunter Safety program.
- “ The wilderness staff continues to present numerous wilderness and Leave No Trace education sessions to local youth groups, scout troops and others.
- “ Every volunteer group that enters the wilderness areas to perform a service project is first provided with training in the use of Leave No Trace techniques. A ‘Wilderness Bag’ containing useful items such as a fire cloth, food scrap screen, collapsible water bucket, litter bag, trowel and other items is provided to each group that does not have this equipment.
- “ In 2001 a Volunteer Wilderness Steward program will be initiated. This program, funded through a grant from the Oregon Recreation Trails Program will train, equip and pay expenses for volunteers who will ride or hike the trails contacting visitors about Leave No Trace ethics and performing maintenance and monitoring tasks.
- “ In June of 2001 a Leave No Trace Trainers session will be held in the Ochoco National Forest. This session is co-sponsored by the Backcountry Horsemen of Oregon (BCHO) and the Forest Service to provide a chance to learn and share the finer points of Leave No Trace and effective teaching techniques in a backcountry setting.

If you would like further information on these education programs, the volunteer and training opportunities, or on the revised wilderness visitor regulations please contact Tom Carlson at 541-426-5536, or by e-mail at tcarlson@fs.fed.us.

Thank you for your input and interest in management of the wilderness.

Kendall Clark, District Ranger

Poker Ride, June 23rd

The group decided during the past two meetings that the best fund raiser for this summer would be a Poker Ride.

It has been decided to hold the ride June 23rd which is the date the diabetes ride most likely would have taken place, but was canceled this year.

During the April meeting, some of the duties of this project were divided up as follows:

Location	Pam C. & Vernita
Port-A-Potties	Brenda & LeAnna D.
Sponsors	Debbie
Food & Beverage	Jamie & Debbie
Advertising	PR Committee

This is a huge undertaking and more help is definitely welcome in preparing for this event. Please contact any of the people listed if you are willing to help out with any of these duties.

On June 23rd we will need as many members as possible to help out. This includes the whole family, the kids can even help out with serving and other duties. Watch for the next newsletter to see how you can help on the day of the ride.
